Team Development and Corporate Objectives

Water Sports are Fun

Firstly we engage groups to highlight and identify the key stages in the group development. this is not a linear process and our focus over the course of the event will be to constantly challenge the group and push them back to previous stages.

The main benefit is to highlight to participants how to negotiate, communicate, solve conflict in the most efficient manner - which is directly related to real world situations in the workplace.

All activities are designed around the companies specified needs and objectives.

Some example of the training objectives include the following:

- * To build trust*
- * Provide team problem solving experience*
- * Develop inter departmental communication*
- * Extend leadership and followership roles*
- * Build momentum for acceptance to change.*

Mini Team Building and problem solving activities are fun at the beach or by the sea. Ao yon is ideally suited to this. We provide you with a range of warm up activities, (ice breaking activities) and then progress to the serious activities which are based on fun activity. We know fun is a valuable stimulus to learning and Sail in Asia ensures that serious corporate objectives are met using this philosophy.
